

READING: GRETA'S LUNCH

Greta goes to a restaurant for lunch. She sits at a table and looks at the menu. She wants a hamburger, fries, and a soda

The waiter comes to her table.

"Hello! Are you ready to order?" he asks.

"Yes," Greta says. "I want one hamburger, one order of fries, and a soda, please."

"Okay," says the waiter. "Would you like ketchup or mustard?"

"Ketchup, please," Greta says.

After ten minutes, the food comes. But there is a problem. Greta looks at her plate.

"This is not my order," she says. "I ordered a hamburger, but this is a chicken sandwich."

"Oh no! I'm sorry," the waiter says. "I will fix it."

The waiter takes the food back to the kitchen. After five more minutes, he comes back with the right order.

"Here is your hamburger, fries, and soda," he says.

"Thank you," says Greta. She puts ketchup on her fries and eats her lunch.
